Tales of Ancient Egypt: Narrative

'The Egyptian Cinderella' Storyboard

Name: _____

Date: _____

There was once a slave girl called Rhodopis. She was always teased by the servant girls for the way she looked. Her hair was light and her skin turned pink in the sun.

After seeing her dancing, Rhodopis's master decided that she would go barefoot no longer. He gave her a pair of rose-red slippers which made the servant girls jealous.

When she was completing her chores, a falcon stole one of the rose-red slippers from Rhodopis. She was forced to go barefoot again.

Meanwhile, in Memphis, the Pharaoh Amasis was on his throne. The falcon dropped the rose-red slipper into his lap.

At once, Amasis vowed to find and marry the owner of the slipper. Many women tried on the slipper, but it didn't fit them.

Finally, the Pharaoh came to the house where Rhodopis lived. She tried on the shoe and the Pharaoh asked her to marry him.
